Nahri is not-for-profit powered by the industry expertise and intellectual rigor and strength of some of Australia's leading education, health, employment advisers, and business consultants.

Established in 2000, we employ and engage leading thinkers and specialists to provide independent policy analysis and advice to business, community and all levels of government concerning all aspects of Aboriginal affairs. We pride ourselves on delivering innovative best practice solutions to our clients. Leaders in community, business and government trust our people to analyze complex issues and provide quality rigorous assessment across all stages of the indigenous policy making and business cycles. Our people have helped tackle some of the most challenging issues in education, business and community in Indigenous Australia.

Our Vision

Performance can make a big difference to the success of any organisation. Nahri recognizes the importance and value of Aboriginal Australia's culture and heritage as an essential core element of our national identity. We believe we are grounded in learning about and understanding and embracing Aboriginal & Torres Strait Islander people's histories and recognising their place in shaping our collective futures for our Australian nation.

We believe that true engagement and consultation paves the way for understanding and respect. Reconciliation is about acknowledging the past to better forge partnerships for the future. Nahri confirms that it is committed to respecting the traditional culture and heritage of the traditional first nations who continue to occupy the land upon which our businesses now stand. We also understand and recognise that the overarching objective of Nahri is to break the cycle of poverty of our Aboriginal & Torres Strait Islander people and our new generations. Our reputation, integrity, high performance is what drives us, it also defines us. We believe the two foremost essentials driving our success are customer service and performance. Nahri is driven by creativity, directed by strategy, focused on performance and client satisfaction.

Water Mobo – Water Tomorrow Healthy Water Awareness Program

The Aims of the Campaign

- To increase public awareness of the health benefits to children and young people of drinking adequate levels of water regularly throughout the school day.
- To improve the quality of provision and access to fresh drinking water in primary and secondary schools

The reasons for the campaign

The campaign will be launched in response to extensive lobbying by the medical profession, particularly by school nurses and children's continence advisors, who were concerned that school children do not drink enough water at school – and that the resulting dehydration contributes to several short and long-term health problems, including bladder and bowel problems. Our research indicates that there is a significant gap in this area as well as significant anecdotal evidence that something needs to be done to curb the deaths of indigenous youth on through poor health standards.

Water Mobo is designed for all Australians, however, we need to seriously close the gap on Indigenous disadvantage by providing greater access to water and healthy messaging for residents of Aboriginal & Torres Strait Islander communities. Water Mobo will engage in community consultations, engagement is a critical element. In each community, partnerships are developed with local organisations and other government agencies enabling the use of local networks and knowledge. Water Mobo Remote combines best-practice theoretical and practical health education and training, with a strong emphasis on drinking clean water awareness. It includes theory and practical lessons on a range of healthy topics such as drinking clean water regularly. Participants also learn about the responsibilities of being a model for others with leading with living a clean healthy lifestyle through eating and drinking water.
